Dear Parents, Carers, Staff and Students,

I am writing to inform you that, as of 1 September, I will be leaving The Bromfords School and Sixth Form College, having been offered the position of Her Majesty's Inspector (HMI), working for Ofsted.

Having worked as a Headteacher in two schools that were both in challenging positions when I started, I have had the opportunity to work closely with a number of HMIs over the last five years and have greatly benefited from their wealth of experience. The role of HMI is one that does not become available very often and I feel that it is an opportunity that I cannot let pass by. I am looking forward to the opportunity to utilise my experience to support a wide variety of schools across the East of England.

Whilst I am excited by my new role, I will also be sad to be saying goodbye to students, staff and the wider Bromfords community. The last three years have been incredibly successful for our school and the progress that we have made would not have been anywhere near as significant without the high levels of commitment, talent and drive contained within our school community.

I am confident that Bromfords will continue to go from strength to strength at this exciting time in its development, staying true to its motto 'to learn and to care'.

Thank you for your support.

Yours faithfully

Daniel Gee
Headteacher
